Love Hive would like to make yoga and teacher training more accessible and inclusive. As part of that effort we are offering scholarship awards each year to persons who would not be able to attend the training otherwise due to financial restrictions. Preference is given to those with financial need AND who are POC, LGBTQ, and those persons who are underrepresented within the yoga community as well as those who have an invested practice at Love Hive Yoga. Now accepting applications. Deadline is June 30th.

Love Hive is currently working to increase diversity among yoga teachers and yoga community by offering this scholarship to persons who are underrepresented with the yoga community. How do you feel you fit into this vision and how would you describe yourself in this context?

Scholarship is also based on financial need. Please tell us about your financial situation.

Any additional information you'd like to share such as specific hardship circumstances?

We highly recommend that you attend classes at Love Hive Yoga BEFORE applying. Where you take your training is an important decision. Resonating with the style of yoga and teaching of the training facilitators (Audra Carmine, Jessica Garay, Valerie Starr, Brianna Gordon, & Meg Satterthwaite) will greatly improve both your chances of success in the program as well as your enjoyment of the intensive immersion experience. What is your experience of Love Hive Yoga and why would you choose to take a training at Love Hive?

Our intention with creating this scholarship is to increase diversity and inclusivity within the yoga community. If awarded a scholarship, what do you plan to do with this opportunity and how would you support the work of continuing to create inclusive yoga spaces?

What does taking a yoga teacher training mean to you? Why do you want to be a yoga teacher and/or deepening your yoga study?
